Beantiful Words to a Bride. The following beautiful letter was written several years ago, by a gentleman to a bride, on receiving her wedding cards. It is exquisitely fresh and original, and full of poetry :

"I am holding some pasteboard in my hands, Addie, and gazing on a card and a came—a name with which your gentle life began—a name with which your throbbing heart was lost. There was nothing strange about the carl. The maiden sign still looks from it. esim and customary, as it locked on many a friendly visit, as it lies in many a formal basket. I am gazing, too, upon a card where the nearer parent tells the world she will be 'at home' one day; and that is nothing new. But there is another card, whose mingling there puts a fiery tongue into this speechless paste board, enamelling fate on common place. It tells us that feeling is maturing into destioy, and that these cards are but the pale herald; of a coming crisis, when a hand that has 'pressed triends' hands and plucked flowers shall close down on him to whom she shall be friend and flower forever.

"I have sent you a few flowers to adern the dying moments of your single life. They are the gentlest types of a delicate and durable friendship. They spring up by our side when others have deserted it; and they will be found watching over our grave when those who should cherish have forgotten us.

"The three great stages of our being are the birth, the bridal, the burial. To the first we bring only weakness; for the last we have nothing but dust, But here at the altar, where life joins life, the pair come throbbing up to the boly man, whispering the deep promise that erms each other with each other's heart to help on the life struggle of care and duty. "The beautiful will be there, borrowing new beauty from the scene; the gay and the frivo-gaz; on all its soattered thoughts pant for; and age will totter up to hear the old words repeated that to their own lives have given the "Some will weep over it as if it were the tomb, and some will laugh over it as if it were a joke. Two must stand by it, for it is

"And now can you who have queened it over so many bended forms, can you come down at last to the frugal diet of a single heart? "Hitherto you have been a clock, giving your time to all the world. Now you are a watch, buried in one particular bosom, watch ing his breast, marking only his hours, and ticking only to the beat of his heart-where lower ties are lost in that higher wedlock, where all hearts are united around the great central heart of all. "Hoping that calm supshine may hallow your time and feeling shall be in unison until these

LYING IN BED, -Let us analyze this lying in bed a little further. I maintain that, in the mere fact of lying in bed, there is something healthy and recuperative to the system. The wheels of life are oiled and eased. The proper and legitimate purpose of stopping in bed is to go to sleep. There is nothing like sleep. There is no tonic or medicine in the whole world like sleep. The more sleep the brain gets the better does the train work. All great train workers have been great sleepers. Sir Walter Scott could never do with less ten hours. A fool may want eight hours, as George III said, but a philosopher wants nine. The men who have been the greatest generals are the men who could sleep at will. Thus it was with both 4 50 Wellington and Napoleon. The greatest speakers in the House of Commons have been the men who can go to sleep there as much as they like. This explained the juvenility of the aged Palmerston. There is a man who has been Attorney General, whom I have seen bury his face in his hands over his desk and sleep soundly, until his own cause should come up .-"Sleep," says the Greek proverb "is the med icine for every disease. It he sleep he will do well." A friend told me that he treated himself for a fever. He went to bed with a large pitcher of lemonade by his side. Ha drank and slept, slept and drank, till he drank and slept himself well again. When you tak, to your bed get all the sleep you can out of your bedstead, even although to quote Dick Swiveller's saying, you have to pay for a double bedded room, confessing that you have taken a most upreasonable amount of sleep out of a single bed. You will be banking a whole store of recuperative energy. Even if you cannot sleep, still keep to your bed. There is no more pescilent hersey than that you shou'd get up directly you are awake. It it is the early riser who catches the worm, the worm is a great idiot in rising still earlier in order to be eaught. If you do not get sleep by lying in bed you get rest. You secure the fallow ground which will hereafter produce a good harvest. Sleep is of course the proper employment for bed, but if you don't sleep you can lie still and
